MORTGAGE TAX.

The law taxing mortgages and other contracts for the payment of money is unjust and impolitic. It represses industry and commerce by the pressure it creates upon borrowers and the obstructions it puts in the way of their enterprises; it retards the prosperity of the State by laying a penalty upon every transaction which involves the use of borrowed money; it discourages farmers and manufacturers, because it taxes not only capital and credit, but also the products of capital, credit, and industry combined; it tends to make money scarce and dear, because when openly and honorably used in loans, it is liable to be taxed several times each year, though all other property is taxed only once, thus offering a premium to concealment, subterfuge, and evasion; at best it imposes double taxation, because it taxes the coin, and also the promise to return it; in effect, it discriminates against home capital, because non-residents can not be compelled to pay the tax unless they own real estate here; it is partial and unequal in its operation, because it taxes only a particular class of contracts—loans, and a particular class of persons—borrowers. If the tax is paid by the lender, it will inevitably increase the current rate of interest on real estate security, because money invested in other securities which are free from taxation will give more profit than loans on real estate when the lender pays the tax. It is unnecessary and unavailing, and has never yielded an income sufficient to pay the expense of attempting to collect it; it never can be made productive, because, being unjust and oppressive it will always be resisted and evaded; it is condemned by experience, and repudiated in practice by the most enlightened States and Nations, and disapproved by the highest authorities upon the science of political economy. Mortgages are not property, and the Legislature should so declare.

With a view to correcting these evils, we, the undersigned, request the Legislature to adopt such measures as will remove the grievances above referred to.

SAVINGS BANKS AND TAX ON SOLVENT DEBTS

As great misapprehension has existed throughout the State on this subject—of the tax on solvent debts secured by mortgage—and especially with reference to the position of the savings banks of San Francisco on that question, I propose to define that position, and will endeavor to show, not only that the charges so persistently made against their motives are unfounded, but that those banks, in their steady opposition to the principle of such taxation, are actuated by an intelligent desire to advance the best interests of the whole State. As suits involving the constitutionality of this tax are now before the courts, I do not intend to discuss its legal bearings, and shall confine myself to the policy of the tax and its effect on the industries of the country. To show this, the character and work of the savings banks must be first understood.

By legislators, by a portion of the press, and in oral argument in the courts, these banks have been denounced as selfish “bloated capitalists,” seeking to avoid their just share of the burdens of the State, and to throw upon the farmers, manufacturers, and other industrial and enterprising classes more than their just proportion of taxation. Are these things so? Let the facts answer: The aggregate amount of deposits held by the savings banks in San Francisco on the first day of January 1875, was $57,405,981, owned by 61,658 depositors, thus giving to each depositor an average capital of $931.04. He could not “bloat” much of that sum.

These depositors are very frequently residents of counties outside of San Francisco; are generally miners, mechanics, laboring men and women, teachers, clerks, and others receiving wages or moderate salaries and who systematically save a portion of their earnings and place it where, without further trouble or loss of time on their part, it will, with the interest, accumulate. A few depositors of larger means sometimes temporarily deposit their surplus capital in greater or smaller sums while waiting for a favorable opportunity to invest in land, etc. There are others by whom, or for whose benefit, investments have been made for the purpose of certain and permanent income in the event of the death of those on whom they are dependent; they are elderly people, married women, infants, and others.

Taking the whole body of depositors together, they will be found second to no other class in the State in those qualities of order, industry, prudence, and forethought which make the good citizen.

It may be said, generally, that in these savings banks there are three classes of deposits, "permanent," "term," and "ordinary"—all loaned out by the bank indiscriminately. The "permanent" can not be withdrawn until the whole business of the bank is closed, and every term and ordinary depositor re-paid, principal and interest. Should a loss occur, it is paid from those permanent deposits, the whole of which must be exhausted before the other classes of depositors can lose a dollar. Some of the banks have a reserve fund, protecting their depositors in the same way. In consideration of this risk and guarantee, permanent deposits draw a somewhat larger interest than the others.

The other two classes, "term" and "ordinary," differ merely in this, that the former requires six months' notice before they can be drawn—which rule, however, is seldom enforced—while the latter are payable on call. As the banks must loan these moneys on time, to earn interest, they only keep on hand sufficient cash to meet the general average calls for money, and they reserve the right, in the event of a great extra demand for money, by depositors, to take time to call in their loans. They have never claimed the right yet. Term depositors are entitled to a small percentage of interest more than ordinary depositors. While some small losses from depreciation in value of land mortgaged have occurred, they have always been met by the permanent deposits or reserve, and no term or ordinary depositor has lost a dollar of principal or interest by any savings bank now in San Francisco.

A portion of those aggregate funds held by the banks is invested in United States bonds, another portion in loans on call, on carefully selected and undoubted collaterals; both meant to meet any sudden call for money which might arise. None is loaned on personal security.

The great mass of the money held by those banks is loaned on first mortgages on real estate, in sums varying from $500,000 to $1,000,000, generally ranging from $1,000.00 to $20,000.00, and to parties resident in almost every county in the State. Many enterprising farmers and dairymen in the best agricultural districts are borrowers—generally to enable them to complete a land purchase, to make improvements, fencing, reclaiming marsh and overflowed land, building, to stock their ranches, etc., and not unfrequently to pay off a mortgage running in the county at a higher rate of interest than is required by these banks.

The borrowers in San Francisco and other cities and towns obtain loans for a greater variety of purposes—generally, however, to buy land, to build, or to secure capital for business operations. A depositor will sometimes invest his deposit in land, and borrow sufficient to complete the purchase, thus paying the seller in full. Some own the land or buy it with their own means and borrow to improve it, on a “building loan,” giving with the mortgage security a bond against liens, the bank advancing the money as it is required. The contractor, knowing that his money is sure, builds at the lowest cash price and both parties are benefited. I have never known a suit on a lien bond, and that fact shows the advantages of the system. Without having sufficient data to state it as a fact, I am of the opinion that the aggregate of purchasing and building loans equals, in the towns, the whole number of loans made for all other business purposes.

The money deposited with the banks belongs to the depositors, and although when loaned out the securities are taken in the name of the bank, the corporation is in fact a mere trustee for the true owner.

The interest earned on deposits, less the expenses of conducting the business and a small sum paid to the Reserve Fund when that exists, is paid to the depositors semi-annually. In practice, however, and it is one of the best signs of the healthy condition of these banks, only about one-third of the declared interest is withdrawn, the other two-thirds being added to the capital of the depositors. On this state of facts it is evident that the bank that is the legal entity called the “corporation,” does not and can not pay the tax if enforced. It must, in the very nature of things, either come out of depositors, and be taken from the interest earned, thus diminishing their dividend, or it must be paid by the borrower.

The banks, as banks, have, therefore, no direct pecuniary interest in this tax question; they neither gain or lose directly by the result.

In practice the borrower will pay either directly as a tax or indirectly in the form of increased interest.

Judge Crockett, in the case of The Savings and Loan Society vs. Austin, struck the true solution on this point of who will pay, when he said: “But in the absence of such a stipulation, an inexorable law of political economy would impose upon the mortgagor the burden, in a different form, of paying the tax on the mortgage debt. Interest on money loaned is paid as a compensation for the use of the money, and the rate of interest, as agreed upon, is the amount which the parties stipulate will be a just equivalent to the lender. If, however, by the imposition of a tax on the debt, the Government diminishes the profit which the lender would otherwise receive, the rate of interest will be increased sufficiently to cover the tax, which, in this way, will be ultimately paid by the borrower. The transaction would be governed by the same immutable, inflexible law of trade by reason of which import duties on articles of consumption are ultimately paid by the consumer, and not by the importer. The rate of interest on money loaned is regulated by the law of supply and demand, which governs all articles of commerce; and burdens imposed by law, in the form of a tax on the transaction, which would thereby diminish the profit of the lender, if paid by him, will prompt him to compensate the loss by increasing to that extent the rate of interest demanded. If his money would command a given rate of interest without the burden, he will be vigilant to see that the borrower assumes the burden, either by express stipulation or in the form of increased interest.

“This is a law of human nature, which statute laws are powerless to suppress, and which pervades the whole realm of trade, governed by the law of supply and demand. Nor would the enactment of the most stringent usury laws produce a different practical result. Human ingenuity has hitherto proved inadequate to the task of devising usury laws which were incapable of easy evasion; and wherever they exist, they are, and will continue to be, subordinate to that higher law of trade which ordains that money, like any other article of commercial value, will command just what it is worth in the market—no more, and no less. Assuming these premises to be correct—and I am convinced they are—it results that it is the borrower, and not the lender, who in fact pays the tax on borrowed money whether secured by mortgage or not. But if secured by mortgage, he is taxed not only on the mortgaged property, but on the debt which this property represents, and which is held as a security for the debt.”

And here it may not be out of place to say that any depositor is liable to be taxed directly for the amount of his deposit; and when so taxed, and taxed again as it is claimed he may indirectly be, for solvent debts due the bank, it will be then double taxation. These depositors and borrowers constitute a large proportion of that class of citizens on whom the State depends for its permanent prosperity. Between them, thousands of homesteads and many substantial improvements are yearly added to the wealth of the State. I have said that our depositors reside in all parts of the State. These deposits, when loaned out, permeate almost every county; and every disturbing element which men instinctively feel to be unjust, and which in its very nature must lessen the volume of deposits and increase the rate of interest to the borrowers for the purposes I have named, must be attended with consequences most injurious to the prosperity of our people. Should the tax be paid by the depositor, his dividends will be diminished and the inducement to pursue that system of industry and economy which has already benefited the State so much will be lessened, and sums which are now saved and placed in banks will be frittered away in dribblets, yielding little useful result. If paid by the borrower, a real percentage is added to the cost of lands bought and of improvements erected, and when the loan is required for other business purposes it becomes in a very perceptible degree more burdensome. The payer of the tax will pay more than his just actual share or proportion of the personal property tax of the State; it is, in fact, neither "equal" nor "uniform." It is notoriously true that the personal property of the State is not all taxed, nor is that which is found by the assessors taxed to its cash value, while mortgages being of record are found and taxed to their full face. It may be said that this is a misfortune incident to the character of the property. That may be true; but when the payer of the tax feels keenly that it is unjust as well as impolitic, that feeling is not allayed by his ascertaining that he has not only to pay the unjust tax itself, but that his property for that purpose is assessed some fifty per cent. higher than his neighbor's personal property.

The banks owe to their depositors every dollar which they have loaned on mortgage, but they are not permitted to deduct what they owe from what is due to them. They must pay tax on the face of their mortgages, while a merchant who has $50,000 due him of solvent debts, not secured by mortgage, and at the same time owes $25,000, is allowed by statute to deduct what he owes from what is due to him, and is required to pay the tax only on the balance of $25,000. Was this statute intended to operate against the depositors and borrowers of savings banks by making this invidious distinction? It looks very like it. The ground on which this tax is claimed to be unjust is plain. Stripped of the fallacies and sophistries in which the question is sought to be involved, it is double taxation pure and simple, and in some cases treble. Men may theorize as they please, and cry out against San Francisco savings banks and their deposits which they call "capital;" the fact remains that these deposits come from and are owned by the industrial classes of many counties of the State, and are loaned on mortgage to aid the enterprise and industry of every part of the country.

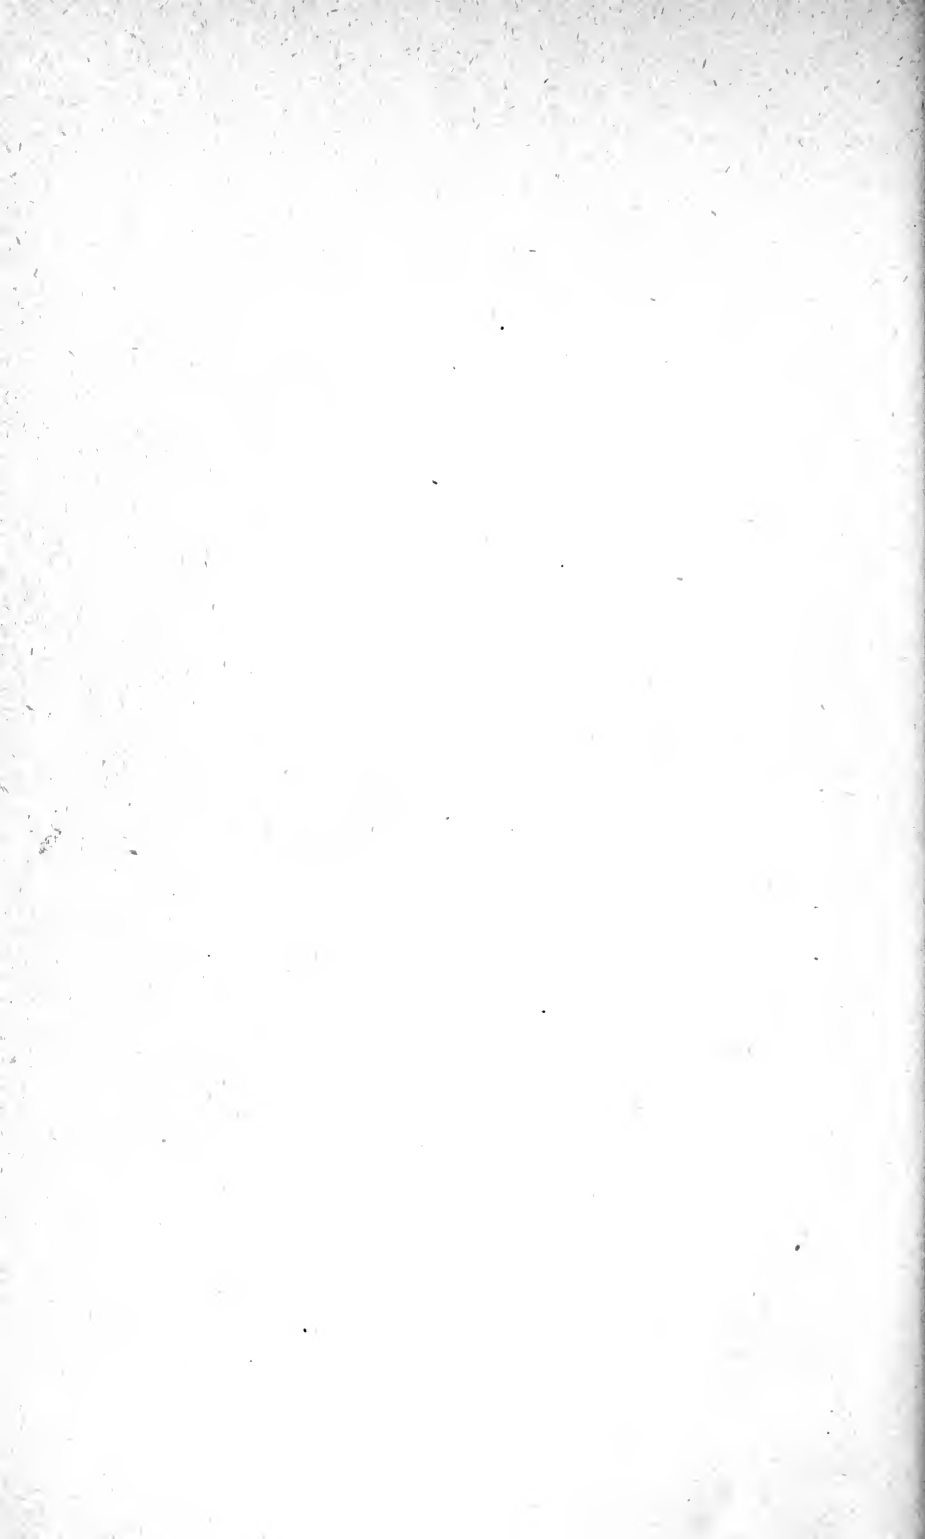

These deposits are not exclusively San Francisco capital. Touch them injuriously, and the whole State suffers; add a burden to the borrowers of these deposits, and almost the whole State has to bear it. Test the question by the rule of common sense and common experience, and the only conclusion that can be arrived at will be that this is double taxation, and that these deposits and the industries dependent on them will suffer from this double taxation. Take examples: A. and B. own a farm worth $20,000, and pay taxes on that amount; A. falls sick and is forced to sell his interest to B., taking a mortgage on the whole land for $10,000.

The productive power of the land is diminished by there being but one man left able to work it; yet A. and B. are now taxed on $30,000, instead of $20,000 as before, without any increase of their wealth. B. has no money to pay for the land, or he would not mortgage his farm. The mortgage money must, therefore, come out of the land itself—in which case no man will pretend that the mortgage does not diminish its value by $10,000—or it must be earned by B. in the course of time. In the latter event they are taxing a thing which has as yet no existence—the unearned $10,000. The tax falls directly in that case on the industry of B., and he is fighting with his hands tied, so far as unjust legislation can tie them.

Again, money is frequently borrowed in large sums to lend again at an increased rate of interest. A. borrows $100,000 at 7 per cent.; he lends this money to B. at 9 per cent.; B. lends to C. at 12 per cent.; all these mortgages go on record, and each is taxed for the same $100,000, making treble taxation. Will any man pretend that the actual wealth of the State is increased from $100,000 to $300,000 by these transactions? If he does so pretend, test the soundness of his views by taking the back track. The taxes on these loans eat up the profits, and the parties are anxious to place themselves in statu quo. C. repays B., and B. repays A., and all these mortgages are canceled and the parties are again just worth the sum they commenced with—$100,000—no more. Is it true that by incurring these two debts of $100,000 each, the wealth of the country has increased $200,000, and that by paying them off the State has sustained a loss of nearly a quarter of a million of its property? And yet this is the logic of the theory of taxing solvent debts secured by mortgage. Such instances may be multiplied ad infinitum.

These banks pay their taxes on all other property—real estate, money, etc. This tax they contest on principle, as they contested the usurpation of the right to tax, and I believe will continue to do so until its injustice is acknowledged and a remedy provided. I have said nothing of the effect of the solvent debt tax on loans by private capitalists. Much that has been said is applicable to such loans, while there are some circumstances which cause the tax to bear more injuriously on the banks and their depositors and borrowers than on private loans. The banks and their depositors and borrowers have hitherto been unjust to themselves in not presenting their case to the public, and in permitting untrue and injurious statements to pass unnoticed. So detrimental has the attempted imposition of this tax been to the interests of the State, that public attention is now becoming fully aroused to its effects, and I hope and expect that a full examination of the whole subject will result either in its defeat as unconstitutional or its repeal as unjust, even should an amendment of the Constitution be required for that purpose.

MORTGAGE TAX.

The law taxing mortgages and other contracts for the payment of money is unjust and impolitic. It represses industry and commerce by the pressure it creates upon borrowers and the obstructions it puts in the way of their enterprises; it retards the prosperity of the State by laying a penalty upon every transaction which involves the use of borrowed money; it discourages farmers and manufacturers, because it taxes not only capital and credit, but also the products of capital, credit, and industry combined; it tends to make money scarce and dear, because when openly and honorably used in loans, it is liable to be taxed several times each year, though all other property is taxed only once, thus offering a premium to concealment, subterfuge, and evasion; at best it imposes double taxation, because it taxes the coin and also the promise to return it; in effect, it discriminates against home capital, because non-residents can not be compelled to pay the tax unless they own real estate here; it is partial and unequal in its operation, because it taxes only a particular class of contracts—loans, and a particular class of persons—borrowers. If the tax is paid by the lender, it will inevitably increase the current rate of interest on real estate security, because money invested in other securities which are free from taxation will give more profit than loans on real estate when the lender pays the tax. It is unnecessary and unavailing, and has never yielded an income sufficient to pay the expense of attempting to collect it; it never can be made productive, because, being unjust and oppressive, it will always be resisted and evaded; it is condemned by experience, and repudiated in practice by the most enlightened States and Nations, and disapproved by the highest authorities upon the science of political economy.

With a view to correcting these evils, we, the undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves and declare that we will not vote for any candidate, of any party, for any legislative office, or for the office of Governor, unless such candidate shall have pledged himself to use his vote, and influence, and his best efforts, to effect such changes in the Constitution and laws of the State as will remove the grievances above referred to.
